An original silent film set in 1928 New Orleans, "That's My Home" is the story of bandleader Benny Bean's triumphant return home to New Orleans after years of touring with his world famous Preservation Hall Revue. Featuring clarinetist Charlie Gabriel as Benny Bean, "That's My Home" follows Benny as he reunites with his family and friends and reacquaints himself with his old stomping grounds. Benny soon learns Preservation Hall's evil landlord, the villain, is threatening to close Preservation Hall. In a last ditch effort to save the Hall, Benny organizes an old time RENT PARTY. The evil landlord, in an attempt to derail Benny's plan, hires "The Seductress" to sing her siren song and cast a spell on Benny. It's now up to the Preservation Hall Jazz Band to undo the spell and save Preservation Hall.

"That's My Home" is filmed in the great silent film tradition using modern and period techniques. "That's My Home" is accompanied by live music by the Preservation Hall Jazz Band.

"That's My Home" is co-directed by award winning photographer and film maker Danny Clinch and Creative Director of Preservation Hall Ben Jaffe.
